ATTORNEYS' FIELD DAY BEFORE JUDGE ALLEN YESTERDAY.

Advantages of These Institutions in the Care of Estates Dwelt Upon at Length-The Citations.

Judge Allen, of the Circuit Court, had a "field day" yesterday, with attorneys representing all the trust companies of Indianapolis before him, trying to convince him that trust companies, under the law creating them, were not required to give an additional bond when they wished to cost of $32,237.93; $107,545.47 was expended | sell a piece of real estate belonging to a ward. Probate Judge Walker heretofore has not required companies to give a bond in these cases, it being understood that the law conferred this distinction on trust companies. The Security Trust Company is about to sell a property belonging to one of its wards, but the attorney for the prospective purchaser thought an old statute requiring guardians to give a bond with freehold security was not superseded by the trust company law. In order to have the Circuit Court pass on the point, Judge Wallker ordered an additional bond given. The Security Trust Company was willing to abide by the probate commissioner's decision, but as all the trust companies were interested in the point raised, Judge Allen wanted to hear all the arguments he could get on the sub-

Mr. Pierre Gray, attorney for the Security Trust Company in the estate before the court, made the opening statement. Mr. Charles W. Smith represented the Union Trust Company, Mr. Charles Thompson the Marion, Alexander C. Ayres the Indiana, and Ovid B. Jameson the Central. These gentlemen contended that it was the distinct purpose of the Legislature in creating trust companies to enable them to perform these trusts without these additional bond qualifications. The law, they insisted, put a large number of safeguards around the management of trust companies, provided for complete supervision by the auditor of state, imposed double liability on stockholders in order that estates might be more safely handled than when in the hands of individuals. They contended that it would be absurd that the law would permit a trust company to qualify, without bond, and handle a million dollars' worth of personal property, and yet when it wished to convert a five-hundred-dollar piece of real estate into an investment producing a better income, to require the company to give a bond with freehold security in twice the amount involved. Senator Thompson showed the practice for eight years in Indianapolis in this matter, and intimated that it would be dangerous procedure for the court to so construe the law as to question the titles which had been obtained by purchasers under guardian sales where trust companies had not been required to give this additional bond. Reference was frequently made to a decision by the Minnesota Supreme Court to sustain the trust companies' position, this high court also having called attention to the fact that it line into Lawton, O. T., was opened for was the demand for safe administration of estates which had led to the adoption of trust-company laws in various State 1. Attorney Ashby took the opposing side. Mr. Ashby was interested in the matter only so far as it pertained to the title of the property which his client proposed to buy. Judge Allen, after hearing the argument for several hours, took the matter under advisement, stating that he believed the question one of too much importance to give an immediate decision. The Security Trust Company had a bond prepared, and will not appeal, should Judge Allen's decision require bond. The company does not wish to delay the sale of its ward's plete his forty-third year as treasurer of property, and so all the trust companies that company, and has a record of which, | probably will unite in another case, a test one, to be taken before the Supreme Court.

With his hands prone on his breast, Weary hands, that rest to-day From their pointing out the way: Weary hands, that wrought for peace; Hands that bade the warfare cease; Weary hands-as white and fair As the waxen liles there. -W. D. Nesbit, in Baltimore American.

chants who draw their supplies from this market were in the city, drawn here by the low rates and state fair, and they were liberal buyers. Moreover, they gave evidence by their conversation that they were quite prosperous, as are their patrons, and the general remark was that their patrons are paying up with unusual promptness, which enables the retail merchants to meet bills at the wholesale houses promptly. In prices there is an unusual steadiness. Dry goods are moving well, with prices more settled, and no immediate changes are indicated. In the lines handled by druggists steady prices are the feature, except on linseed oil, quinine and turpentine. The opinion prevails that linseed oil will advance further. The leather merchants have had a busy week thus far, and so strong is the tone to prices that purchasers do not hesitate about stocking up freely. The wholesale grocery houses also have had a busy week. Seldom are there two days in which more goods are sold than on Tuesday and Wednesday. On Commission row trade was active. The low prices prevailing, except on Irish potatoes, has perceptibly increased consumption and receipts are so large that there is little prospect that consumers will have to pay luxury prices unless it be Irish potatoes. The produce dealers have an inning this week, and find it difficult to fill orders for eggs, butter and poultry. The butter market especially is in strong position. Packers yesterday would pay 121/2 cents for good stock, and it is said they did pay 15c for some choice roll butter; but such a price would hardly be realized except for the big local demand at the present time. Provisions are fast movers in a domestic way. Flour is not in as strong position as to prices as last week. Journal represent the highest range. Hides are moving along in the rut of several days past, with prices, however, firm. The American Sugar Refining Company, at New York, reduced the prices of refined grades Nos. 4, 5, 6 and 8 five points each. The local grain market is under a cloud, notwithstanding the high prices paid for corn and oats. Receipts by rail are the lightest at any time in many years. Local cerealine mills are much troubled to keep up their supply. Offerings on the wagon market yesterday were not as large as for some days past, so far as corn and oats are concerned, but hay was in abundant supply and in the after part of the day sold 50c to $1 a ton lower than in the forenoon. Track bids yesterday, as reported by the secretary of the Board of Trade, ruled as follows, there being no changes from the quotations of Tuesday:
